

My Valentine's story

Once upon a time, there was an average day in February, nothing special was happening. In a small village near the forest, there lived a young man called Zack. Everyone in the neighborhood knew Zack as one of the most good-natured and caring people. He was also a volunteer in a shelter for homeless people. Every time he saw someone in need, he could not walk incuriously. Unfortunately, when he dedicated his life to taking care of others, he forgot about himself. February 14 was the day of his birthday and also Valentine's day. As I said, he always put others above himself, so he even forgot about his birthday. For him, it was another average day that he spent on supporting others. Happily, his friends remembered about this special day. Zack's kindness meant everything for everyone, so they could not let him spent that day alone. They gathered together and discussed the idea of making the best birthday ever for Zack. At first, they decided to do the action of helping everyone in need. They came up with this idea because they knew it would be just a magnificent gift for their friend. For a few hours, they were able to help over 20 people by doing small good deeds. Like Zack always said, acts of kindness make the world a better place. After a while, they put into practice a plan of surprising Zack with his birthday party. All his friends and family gathered at the same place. Finally, undercover a family dinner, Zack came to his parent's house without knowing anything. After crossing the threshold everyone started to sing Happy Birthday and wished him only the best. He was super shocked and amazed at the same time. Zack got to know about all the deeds his friends had done. He was touched and glad that he had those irreplaceable friends. That's how tiny gestures can make an unforgettable birthday and a Valentine's day at the same time. On Valentine's day, it is not all about love but more specifically about spreading kindness.
