

“My Valentine’s story”

So you’re probably thinking to yourself as to what will this story be about. Well, let me tell you that it won’t just be another Valentine’s story about people who fell in love with each other, it’ll be a story about my cat’s love for everyone in my family.

His name is Julian – we got him off a building site, because no one wanted him. When my Grandpa took him to our house, we thought he wouldn’t survive. Today, Julian isn’t the same as he was then. He loves us and shows that everyday. One of the signs of his cat’s love is his never ending wait for the household members to get back home after school or shopping. He “leaves the guard” when everyone gets home, because he knows that he no longer needs to worry about anyone. He goes to rest when everyone’s home. Julian’s a wonderful cat, but he also has his moods. He’s always mad at us for leaving him at home when we go on holidays. He doesn’t want to come to us, when we get back home, but his anger quickly disappears. Since the start of online learning Julian’s with me on every lesson. You can sometimes see him in my background, when he’s fooling around. Julian also likes to lay on my books while the online classes are going on. If someone thinks that cats don’t smile, then he’s very wrong. My cat smiles a lot, when he’s happy while purring and showing one of his teeth. Even if I don’t have any time for him, he’s gonna do everything to make me find it. He usually tries to get my attention by nudging me with his paw, kissing me or rubbing against me. It makes me laugh and I do what he wants.

Maybe it’s not a Valentine’s story, but it’s a story about a pet’s love for a human. My cat gives me a feeling of happiness and thanks to him I’m not feeling alone. But also when I want to fool around I have someone to do it with.
