

My Valentine's story

I thought that writing a story about my actual Valentine's day would be extremely boring for you to read, that is because I do not really like meeting new girls and because of that, I do not have any interesting stories. I would rather try to have a relationship with a girl that I know well, than with a person that I have just met. And in my mind a vision of a Valentine's day is to meet someone new, so I think this is a good argument to not be a part of that weird holiday.

So, after a long introduction in which I am trying to heal my poor broken heart, I think my idea will attract your attention.

Let me introduce you a question, that just got into my head before I decided to participate in this writing contest. I would like to ask you a question, have you ever thought about how weird couples are? I mean with all the respect for people who are in love, it is just a question. Well, I have thought about it. I did some research, and I found a Polish site, a site for people who are in love. It is kind of a forum when they can share some stories and tips with each other. The first thing I saw was an article about the most common things couples do. I assume that you know what the thing number one was. There is nothing special about seeing a couple kissing, but the other thing that I read about was pretty much weird. The thing number two is having an argument, and maybe it is something wrong with me that I do not find having an argument romantic in any way, but to my great surprise this wasn't the weirdest thing yet. The thing number three was "A good relationship is getting stronger when a partner can read the other partner's mind". And here is my question number two, why would anyone try to read in someone's mind? A relationship should be built by talking. Talking is a thing that gets us closer to each other and the only way to get to know our loved one better. I think that couples are just getting more and more weird, they try to get better in understanding the other half, but at the same time it is more and more difficult for them to actually understand their loved ones.